MAY MODIFY TERMS OF PEACE

Huns Plead It Will Be Impossible to Fill Financial Requirements.

WHAT WILSON FAVORS DOING

There is a probability that Germans will secure a lessening in the severity of the peace terms. The Germans pleaded it will be impossible to fill the financial requirements of the allies and certain territorial relinquishment is being considered by the council of four. A full discussion of the German counter proposals was held by President Wilson with the American delegation today.

Great Britain, it is said, favors some concessions to Germany, but Greece will not waver from the original terms. On the other hand the Americans are not adverse to making certain minor concessions, but do not favor going to the extent the British propose.

The head of the Austrian peace delegation has departed from St. Germain for Innsbruck, carrying the allied peace treaty.

Counter revolutions are reported from numerous Hungarian towns, forcing hundreds of refugees to the Austrian frontier towns, seeking safety.

In Russia an unconfirmed report says Petrograd has fallen to the Finnish and Estonian troops.

What Wilson Favors

Paris.—American economic experts, in conference with President Wilson today, advocated that Germany be given mandates over her former East African colonies to assist her to meet her financial obligations.

The matter was opened in consequence of Premier Lloyd George's proposal that Upper Silesia be returned to Germany for economic reasons. The American experts, however, suggested that Poland retain Upper Silesia and the Germans be given supervision over certain of her recent East African possessions. In addition to this question the American commissioners and experts discussed the entire problem of reparations, the Saar Valley settlement, details of the League of Nations and the points brought out in the German counter proposals. The president instructed the American experts to meet their British and French conferees and draw up final conclusions for submission to the Big Four.

From an authoritative source it was learned today that Wilson, Lloyd George and Clemenceau are now agreed on the advisability of modification necessary and when it was said to be the degree of modification necessary and when it should be done. Lloyd George, it was understood, favors changing the terms before compelling the Germans to sign. Clemenceau was reported to insist that the present treaty should be signed and that it should then be reopened for such modifications as are deemed essential. The president's view as to when the modifications should be made could not be obtained, but that he is in favor of several changes was declared to be certain.

YOUNG--WALKER

Dennis Walker, age 16, of the firm of Fuqua & Walker, of Fordsville, and Miss Kathleen Young, bookkeeper for H. Wilson & Co., of the same place, were united in marriage at 8:30 p.m., at the Baptist church, at Fordsville, Thursday. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Russell Walker, pastor of Hartford Baptist church, a brother of the groom. He was assisted by Rev. R. L. Brandenburg, the bride and groom's pastor.

The church was tastefully decorated with daisies, roses and ferns. A beautiful solo, "I Love You," was sung by Mrs. Bert Wilson, of Louisville, a cousin of the bride, and the wedding march was played by Mrs. Mayme Hobrecht, of Fordsville. After the ceremony all returned to the residence of Mrs. Kate Young, mother of the bride, where refreshments were served.

After refreshments, the couple stole away from their friends and went to Owensboro in an auto, from whence they went on a brief bridal tour. They will return this week and be at home to their friends at Fordsville.

COUNTY SCHOOL NOTES

Teachers' Examination will be held at Fordsville the third Friday and Saturday in this month, June 20 and 21st. This is for all who wish to make certificates and have an intention of teaching or have a second-class certificate and wish to make a first. Remember the dates and place, Fordsville, June 20 and 21.

Reports from the Division meetings last Saturday for the purpose of electing teachers indicate a shortage of teachers almost equal to that of last year. The greatest shortage is reported in Division 5, where they are five teachers short. There is a shortage of one in Division 6. Other Divisions have not been fully heard from.

Teachers Institute will be held the second week in July, from the 7th to 11th. Prof. Schiff, of Tennessee, will be the instructor.

WELL KNOWN CITIZEN GOES TO HIS REWARD

R.T. Iler, Aged Harness Dealer, Succumbs Friday After Long Illness.

Robert Triplett Iler, one of the best known and most liked citizens of the county, died Friday morning shortly after midnight of diseases incident to old age. He had been in failing health for many months and when he became bedfast the last time, his recovery was not expected. He had been afflicted for some time with chronic diarrhoea when finally caused his death, together with a general breakdown due to his advanced age.

Mr. Iler was 83 years of age and had spent almost the entire period of his life in Ohio County. He was born near Ceralvo and was engaged in the harness business there and at Hartford continuously for over fifty years. He was well known to almost every one and a host of his friends will regret to hear of his death. He was a member of the Presbyterian church.

He is survived by five children, his oldest son, W. P. Iler having died seven years ago. Those who survive him are: Mrs. C. M. Ferguson, O'Bion, Tennessee; Mrs. P. Jones, Ceralvo; R. E. Iler, of Rockport; Mrs. T. J. Mullin, of Princeton, Ind.; and J. C. Iler, Hartford. Funeral services were conducted Sunday evening at Mt. Olivet, Muhlenburg County, by Rev. R. D. Bennett and interment was made in the cemetery there.

CROMWELL WARRANTS

They are strong on warrants at Cromwell if we may judge by the number that were sworn out by Cromwell citizens for each other last week. It seems that some time back Mr. Dick Shields swore out a warrant for town Marshall Jesse Embry for operating as shall without license. Then recently the Marshall tried to arrest Mr. Shields' son, Irvin Shields, and during the arrest Mr. Avery Stewart intervened with the result that Mr. Embry has sworn out a warrant for Mr. Stewart or interference. During the process of arrest young Shields was injured and now another warrant has been sworn out against Marshall Embry, charging him with assault. The cases are set for trial Friday.

NOTICE TO FARMERS

Just received a third car of F. A. AMES BUGGIES—Have plenty of sisal binder twine at 22-1-2 cents per pound. A few McCormick Binders at reduced prices. Come to see me at Beaver Dam.

ARMENIAN-SYRIAN RELIEF FUND CAMPAIGN IS NOW IN FULL SWING HERE

Ohio County's Apportionment is $1480.00 Committees for Each Precinct are Selected for Soliciting.

The campaign to raise $1480.00, Ohio County's quota in the campaign for the relief of the distressed sufferers in the near East, is now on in full swing. Committees for the various precincts have been appointed and will begin at once soliciting funds. We publish below the names of these committees and the quotas of each precinct and will publish each week the amount paid in by each precinct.

If there was ever a deserving cause, this must be one. The Holy Land, the cradle of Christianity, was overrun by the atrocious Turks and the Armenians and Syrians, Christian peoples who held to their faith in face of death, were persecuted in the most horrible manner. Thousands of them are homeless and starving. They now appeal to their American friends for help and assistance. The following are the county committees:

E. Hartford—A. C. Porter, Mrs. R. Holbrook, C. O. Hunter, $125.00. W. Hartford—Mrs. S. A. Bratcher, Mack Fogle, J. C. Iler, $125.00. Beda—George Jones, W. R. Carson, Mrs. Dudley Westerfield, $25.00. Sulphur Springs—Mrs. Cora Renfrow, C. C. King, Mrs. J. A. Duff, $50.00. Magan—N. P. Kelly, Esq. Will Edge, $25.00. Cromwell—Dr. Oscar Allen, Clarence James, $50.00. Cool Springs—Miss M. Williamson, W. P. Bennett, $25.00. N. Rockport—A. B. Kevil, Dr. A. D. Park, $75.00. S. Rockport—Mrs. Z. Herrel, Mrs. H. D. Robb. Select—Wm. Baize, S. M. James, $25.00. Horse Branch—Mrs. W. O. Reed, Walker Myrtle, $50.00. Rosine—Miss Mayme Crowder, C. E. Crowder, Andrew Alford, $25.00.

The above is a likeness of Miss Elizabeth Ellis, of Sturgis, who recently won first prize in the Central Interscholastic Contest held in Sturgis. Miss Ellis is 15 years of age and is the daughter of Charles Ellis, formerly of Hartford but now cashier of the bank at Sturgis. Miss Ellis is a niece of Messrs. W. E. and Howard Ellis, of Hartford, and is well known here. We are indebted to the Louisville Courier-Journal for the use of the above cut.

Mrs. W. A. Hocker and son, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hocker, Mr. and Mrs. M. Taylor, and grand-children, Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Stevens and daughter, Mr. Albert Patterson, Mr. Reheli Chick, Mr. and Mrs. Carl M. Taylor and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Hocker and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Blankenship, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Paxton and children, Mr. and Mrs. Otis H. Stevens and children. All departed feeling they had been benefited by having met together, and wishing Mr. Stevens many happy returns of the day.

DOG BITES LITTLE BOY

Hubert, the little son of Rev. Willis Carden, of Rosine, was bitten by a dog last week and is in a very serious condition. The little child was playing with some other children when a large black hound sprang at him, tearing the flesh on his leg until several stitches were required. The dog was killed. It is not thought the canine was affected with rabies, and though the child has suffered considerably, it is thought he is not dangerously injured.

CROPS IN COUNTY

ARE FAR BEHIND

Owing to Excessive Rains and Farmers Are Badly Discouraged.

Reports coming from every section of the county indicate that this is the most backward season experienced in years. Very few crops are making any headway, while a great number of farmers have never planted their crops and some have not even prepared their ground. At this time, with only a part of the season before them, the farmers could not hope to make a full crop if it should cease raining and the soil would do to work. But as it is, it would require several days of sun before the ground could be cultivated and there seems little possibility of receiving it. There will doubtless be a very short crop of corn as well as tobacco, though the tobacco seasons have been peculiarly good during the last few weeks. However, with the soil so wet that it cannot be worked, weeds keep on growing and will present a problem when the farmers get an opportunity to combat them.

Very little corn has been planted. Much of what has been planted in the lowlands is under water or has been ruined by the rains while that on the uplands is being choked out by the weeds. Wheat is looking puny and weak from excessive moisture and is not heading scarcely at all. If the weather should clear now and continue so, there will be a short crop; if it does not, there is a doubt whether there will be any at all.

MR. J. W. DABNEY HONORED

Sunday, June 8th, friends and relatives gathered at the home of J. W. Dabney in honor of his 64th birthday. About 65 guests assembled, each with well-filled baskets and a long table was spread across the dining room filled with good things to eat. An enjoyable day was spent by all.

Those who attended were: Mr. and Mrs. Estill Spinks and son, Charlie; Mr. and Mrs. Norman Hunt and daughters, Rhea and Dena; Mr. and Mrs. Othe Daniel and son, Donald; Mr. Miah Minton, Mr. and Mrs. James Yewell and Elsie Hines; Mr. and Mrs. Lacy Dabney and children, Marie, Jesse, Altie May and Paul; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Wilson and children, Florence and Johnnie; Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Day and baby, Carmen; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mitchell and children, Pearl and Earl; Mr. Simon Faught; Mr. Alex Minton; Mr. and Mrs. C. Y. Austin, daughter, Bess and son, Earl; Mr. and Mrs. Bennie McDaniel and children, Raymond and Maurice; Mr. and Mrs. Lawson Raines and baby, Samuel Nith; Mrs. Laws daughter, Minerva, and son, Arthur; Mrs. Wilbur Vance and baby; Mr. and Mrs. Vernie Dabney and children, Alma Gordon, Sunshine and Virgil; Mrs. Lake Wright, Mrs. Hannah Stevens, Mr. Marion Austin, Mr. R. B. Stevens, Mrs. Lola Morris and baby; and Mr. William Vance and daughter, Ruth.

AN ENJOYABLE DAY

On Sunday May the 25 the brothers, sisters and near relatives of Mr. R. B. Stevens, of El Paso, Texas met with well filled baskets at the home of Otis Stevens to celebrate the birthday of Mr. R. B. Stevens. A dinner fit for a King, was served at twelve o'clock in the large dining room. Those present were: Mr. R. H. Stevens, father of R. B. Stevens, Mrs. Hannah Stevens, Mr. Marion Austin, Mr. R. B. Stevens, Mrs. Lola Morris and baby; and Mr. William Vance and daughter, Ruth ONE PRESENT.

MAKE APPEAL TO OHIO CITIZENS

Ministers and Business Men

Urge Support of the Relief Drive.

THOUSANDS ARE STARVING

Dear Friends:—We take it that your hands are filled with cares and your life crowded with kindly deeds and because of these facts we are coming to you once more with a story of distress and suffering. You have stood by the boys that have fought for liberty and sympathized with those who have made sacrifice, but there has come to us out of this war which now, thanks to an intervening Providence, is closed. Many millions whom we have not seen that have been deprived of all resource, so far as the necessities of life are concerned, and who have but one narrow gleam so far as help is concerned, and that is through the sympathetic and generous hearts of the men and women of America. No appeal of this kind has ever been made to us in vain, and we will not now fall those whose hands are held out to us for help. Already hundreds of thousands have starved and many are dying daily for want of bread. Ours is a land of plenty, and we are a people imbued with the helping instinct. Think of it, were you and yours appealing for help how your heart would sink if told that nobody cared.

Ohio county has been assigned the task of collecting for this cause the small sum of $1,408.00, and as there is no other organization working in behalf of these down-trodden people it is literally left to us to say whether they shall live or perish. This movement is strongly endorsed by the President of these United States and Welfare Workers throughout the world.

Therefore, in the name of thousands of hungry children, bereaved and broken-hearted mothers, and for the sake of Him who has wrought us our salvation and has given us this bounty and civilization, we are asking your co-operation in securing this amount, every cent of which will be immediately sent to their relief. With kindest feelings toward all unfortunate folk and especially toward those of the Near East.

Please get together and decide upon your plans and have your amount raised and sent to Miss Cliffe Felix, Secretary-Treasurer.

Yours truly,

Rev. A. D. Litchfield, Russell Walker, J. Walter Greep; C. O. Hunter, W. H. Barnes, A. D. Kirk, J. B. Wilson, Mack Cook, E. G. Bassett.

VALUABLE COWS KILLED BY LIGHTNING

Three valuable cows belonging to Mr. Frank Black were killed by lightning during the electrical storm Saturday night. One was a holstein and the other two were Jerseys and their value was placed at about $240. The cows were in an open pasture and had gone under a tree for shelter, when the lightning struck the tree, killing all three.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our sincere appreciation and thanks to the many friends who so kindly rendered their care and service during the illness and death of our beloved father, R. T. Iler. Words can only in a small measure express our gratitude.

GETTING READY FOR DECENTNIAL CENSUS

Force of 85,000 Employees Will Be Needed—Must Be Done In Few Weeks

Washington, D. C.—Uncle Sam is rapidly getting ready to "take stock." To put it more clearly, preparations are well along for the fourteenth decennial census, to be taken in 1920.

The last Congress granted an appropriation for the work, and a force of several hundred clerks is busy in the Census Bureau making the necessary preparations for the huge task, which must be accomplished in a few weeks.

For this immense job, the bureau's regular force of about four hundred employees will be expanded to 85,000 or more. The appropriation which Congress has made for the work is $20,500,000. This amount covers also the ordinary expenses of the bureau during 1919.

The census will include not only enumeration of the population of the United States, continental and insular, but also a canvass of the agricultural, manufacturing, mining and quarry, oil and gas and other interests for all the states as well as for the District of Columbia, Alaska, Hawaii, Porto Rico, Guam, Samoa and the Canal Zone.

For the purposes of the enumeration, the country has been divided into 378 supervisory districts, with a supervisor for each, to whom about 85,000 enumerators will report.

Date is Advanced

The actual enumeration will be completed in a few weeks, although it will be several months before results will begin to be known. Nevertheless, the figures will be available much earlier for the 1920 census than was the case in 1910, because this time the census will be as of January 1, instead of April 15, as in 1910. The change was made because it is believed the agricultural census will be more reliable on the earlier date.

Chief interest in the census, of course, will be in the population, but a great many interests require much more detailed information, such as the ratio of males and females, distribution, degree of illiteracy, proportion of whites and blacks, proportion of foreign born to native population and many other facts that can be learned only through Uncle Sam's decennial "stock taking." The 1920 census is certain to bring out many changes, for the past decade has been one of wonderful growth and development.

Next to population, the greatest interest will be in the census of agriculture. This will show the number and acreage of farms in the country and in each state and county; the number of acres of improved land; value of farms and the stocks of machinery; number and kind of live stock, and practically every detail of information relating to agriculture.

The census of manufactures is taken every five years, unlike the other inquiries. This will be of unusual interest this time because the last census was taken in 1914, when the world was at peace. Since then the greatest war in history has been fought and America has accomplished an industrial expansion that is unparalleled. This census, therefore, covering the calendar year 1919, will present a statistical portrayal of the transition of American industries from peace to war and from war back to a peace basis.

MARKET NEWS BULLETIN

Washington.—Arrangements for the inauguration of a permit system to control the movement of this year's mammoth grain crop announced by the Railroad Administration contemplate the appointment of grain control committees at each primary market comprised of a representative of both the operating and traffic departments of the Railroad Administration and a third party representing the transportation division of the U. S. Grain Corporation. Shippers will apply thru the railroad agent at the point of origin to the grain control committee at the market to which they wish to send their product. If conditions permit permission for shipment will be given promptly. Otherwise the shipment will be delayed until storage facilities are such that the grain can be moved without causing freight congestion.

LAMBS. Southern lambs have started to move, packers having some forwarded from other markets. The crop is reported larger than last year, and due to the mild winter, the supply is expected to move earlier than usual. This grade of stock will fill in when the Colorado Lamb season closes.

COAL. Farmers will do well to secure their requirements of coal at as early a date as possible because there is impending a 50,000,000 ton shortage in Bituminous production and an 8,000,000 ton shortage in Anthracite. Beyond this the export demand for fuel is particularly heavy from European countries, especially from Italy. Coal prices at present are showing a tendency to raise with the possibility of much higher prices in the early winter.

STRAWBERRIES. The official forecast of the commercial acreage for sixteen early states this season is 51,255 acres compared with 72,358 in 1918, 98,690 in 1917, 98,825 in 1916, and with 80,631 in 1915. Forecast of yield this year is 2,350,010 crates of 24-quarts, compared with 4,322,218 in 1918, 6,920,369 in 1917 and 8,478,215 in 1916. The official forecast of considerable decrease in acreage of strawberries in 16 early states is giving a strong tone to the market with prices equal or better than those of the same period last year.

The back aches at times with a dull indescribable feeling, making you weary and restless; piercing pains shoot across the region of the kidneys, and again the loins are so lame that to stoop is agony. No use to rub or apply a plaster to the back if the kidneys are weak. You cannot reach the cause. Follow the example of this Hartford citizen.

Miss Emma E. Park, Washington, Hartford, says: "From time to time I suffered with a dull aching at this time I have had dizzy spells and black spots appear before my eyes. My kidneys have been bothered also, and I have been caused a great deal of annoyance on this account. I have gotten up in the morning feeling tired and worn-out. I have found that Doan's Kidney Pills did me a lot of good whenever I suffered in that way and I consider them an excellent kidney medicine."

Price 60c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Miss Park had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props, Buffalo, N. Y.

NEW, TRUE, AND INTERESTING

Kentucky Republicans will hear with considerable interest of the appointment of Mr. Phil Brown, of color, to a place in the Congressional library at Washington at a salary, we understand, of $2,800 a year.

Brown's appointment is one of the first "results" of the election of a Republican Congress. What his peculiar qualities are for this position at the expense of the taxpayers we are not advised. He may be a good man for the place or not. But the interest in Kentucky will relate more to the part Brown played in the year 1916 in Kentucky politics.

It is the custom of the Kentucky Republicans to invariably send a colored man to their national conventions as a delegate from the State. We trust it will soon arrive and be put to work as the roads tell to Phil Brown. The delegates to the national convention elect the national committeeman from the In the death of uncle "Bob" Her State. Brown, when he landed at the county loses one of its best known and most respected citizens. The Herald, together with the host of his friends, extends the most earnest sympathy to his family in their bereavement.

Mr. Brown voted for Mr. McCullough. But great men frequently change their minds. Like Saul on the way to Damascus, Brown saw a great light, and that light guided him into the camp of Mr. A. T. Hert, of Louisville. Brown voted for Mr. Hert on the decisive ballot and Mr. Hert was elected, and has since been engaged in the congenial task of running the affairs of the Republican party in the State.

But there is a considerable element within the Republican party in Kentucky that is not at all pleased with the management of that party by one small group of men. What they will do to change matters we do not know, but, in any event, they will be interested to hear about Phil Brown and his place in the Congressional library. —Louisville Post.

Preachers and theologians, chancing social service rainbows, have been preaching every since the war began, that the boys when they returned would force a new age on the world. Their vision would be so enlarged, their perspective so changed, that they would demand a new religion, a new government, a new society, so vastly different and superior to the old that it would be next to impossible to fulfill it. Well, most of the boys have returned and, so far as we can see, they are little changed from the boys who went away. If any difference exists, they love the old home, the old church and the old government better than before. They have seen now entirely superior our system is over any thing in the world and they appreciate it. In truth, it was folly to expect a short war to entirely revolutionize the world, anyway. There have been hundreds of wars, as fierce in proportion as this one, and the world still slowly builds upward. A decade cannot remake a world. It requires endless aeons of relentless toil and ages of anguish before the old state can be retouched into a system of infinitely greater promise.

There still a number of roads in Ohio County where the bowers of green oaks cast their cooling shades athwart the way; the blackberry-briers hold their tempting fruitage to the passerby, clinging on to him and begging him to partake as he rides by; where the honeysuckle vines clamber over the fences within reach of the autoist, shedding the sweetest of perfume that ever gladdened his nostrils to him as he passes; where the turning of the road is shut off from the view of one coming down the stretches because of the multitude of pleasant shrubbery. There is a law somewhat to the effect that it is a penalty not to keep one's road side cleared for a certain number of feet back from the road—it would be a pity to enforce it and destroy romance, though it might save a few accidents and possibly lives.

The Hartford Republican comes again with that exploded accusation that we are defenders of lynch law. The Republican made this statement some months back, quoting our entire editorial which it construed to its own meaning, and failed to prove its point. We have never defended lynch law and even if the Republican is threadbare of argument, it should be able to state the time and our words. The fact is, the anti-lynching law which the Republican party is making the shibboleth of its promises and the strong plank of its platform, has already been enacted by a Democratic legislature, in substance, and will become effective by the time the Republicans try to make good their promises at the polls.

All signs fail in wet weather. Even the famous moon sign loses its charm. Before the previous moon had waned, we noticed that it was lying on its back and asked a local weather prophet what it betokened. He told us, a wet moon because it was full of water. The last moon was standing on its tip and we asked another prophet its meaning and he said, "A wet moon, don't you see it is on its tip? That is so the water can run out!" And both were right.

The county is fortunate in securing one of the huge war trucks which are being given to the different counties for road repairing and other work. Mr. J. H. Thomas, a who drawing, was evidently lucky as he secured one of the two ton

CHAPTER XIII

A GLIMPSE OF LIFE

"You seem to be in a hurry," said the editor cheerily as Merlin rushed breathlessly into the office; "did you get the story?"

The reporter sat in the nearest chair and waited a few minutes before he could gain his breath. "No," he gasped at last, "I didn't get the story."

"What? You failed after all your blowin'? Well, I'll be darned! You are some reporter, you are! What did you run in here like a scared rabbit for? Did old man James take in after you when you cried to interview him?"

"No," answered Merlin, who was regaining his poise, "it was not that—the old fellow was willing enough to be interviewed. But it was a thousand times worse. Those brutes down there jumped on me, Pedro took my part and they killed him, then they all jumped on the barkeeper. I guess he is dead by this time."

"Huh! then you bolted, right in the middle of the finest story the Sun ever had offered. My God! it would have filled the whole front page and you being an infernal coward missed it all."

"Don't call me a coward!" cried Merlin, rising from the chair as quickly as his bruised limbs would permit him and standing threateningly in front of his "boss". "Don't call me a coward sir—I come from Kentucky."

"Is that so?" mocked the editor, at the same time receding a few steps; "well coward or no coward there is one thing which you are not, and that is a reporter. Here you pop yourself up to write a story and just when things begin to happen, you run. Now if I had sent Wilson, the associate Editor—

"He would have got drunk like the rest of them and made a beast of himself in order to get a little non-important news. But don't you ever believe I'll do it, no sir, I will not. Send Wilson or any body you please but don't ever say saloon to me again."

"Well you can just get out then" said Johnston "I haven't got money to throw away on a reporter that went go where I send him. You may count yourself fired. Here is your money."

He wrote a check and handed it to Merlin who remained silent until he had finished and placed his fountain pen back in his pocket. "No Mr. Johnston you will not have to fire me" he said. "I am going to quit—quit Journalism and everything connected with it. I believed it was the rottenest game ever played before I took this position and now I am convinced of it. Well, good day."

"Good Day" snapped the editor. And with this Merlin passed out of the building and down into the street. For a few moments he stood still, undecided as to what to do next, still holding the check in his hand. A year ago he had cut loose from old ties and set adrift in the wide world, and now on precisely the same day in April, he was again going out in the mighty strong, forsaken, friendless, but by the might of his irresistible will he had won out before, won over love, failure and abuse. Could he not do so again? This was the question that he asked himself again and again as he wended his way through a back alley to his boarding house, and each time his incomparable youth seemed to answer an assurance that he could.

When he arrived at the place that had been home to him for the last year, he was met at the door by his hostess, an aged woman, who had seemed to him almost like a mother. There were tears streaming down her cheeks and she threw up her hand at him as he approached. "Hush, walk softly child, they have just brought Pedro in," she said.

Like a flash his mind went back over the scene at the saloon when the Mexican had so heroically saved his life—perhaps only to lose his own. For a few moments he was speechless then he stammered, "Is—he—DEAD?"

"Yes, he is dead, poor, poor Pedro!" she answered, and then—

"Would you like to see him?" "I believe I would." With noiseless steps she led him up the carpeted stairs to the little room where he and Pedro had always slept. Then she pointed to the sheeted bed and went out, leaving Merlin alone in the room. He pulled aside the covering and gazed for a long time at the once dark face of his friend, now pale in death. In his breast, near the heart, was a bloody rent—the place where the bullet had pierced. But his face was calm and restful as if the spirit had winged its flight to a place where the brawls and scourgings of earth do not come. Tears came into the eyes of Merlin. "Dear old boy!" he spoke into the unhearing ears of Pedro. "You did it all for my sake—for me! You had your faults as all of us have, but taking it all in all I'd rather risk your fate than many another. The Scriptures say, 'Greater love hath no man than he who will lay down his life for a brother,' and that is what you have done!"

He again covered the dead body and with as little noise as possible, packed his trunk. When this was finished he went downstairs to arrange for his departure from Smithville. At the foot of the steps he met his host.

"Have you been up to see Pedro?" asked the old man.

"Yes."

"That was too bad, wasn't it?"

"I should say it was, and over nothing too," answered Merlin in a faltering voice.

"How did it come up?"

"He was taking my part. A bunch of those miners tried to beat me up again and he intervened. They shot him. If I hadn't gone down to the saloon for a story for that rotten paper, it would never have happened."

"Those miners are a tough set when they are drunk but a good-hearted bunch when they are not," the host answered.

"And I am going to leave Smithville," said Merlin.

"Going to leave, why?"

"Because I am discharged and if I were not I would quit. I am through with this town."

"Why, my boy, I hate to see you go," said the old man tenderly;

"Where are you going and what are you going to do?"

"I don't know."

"Well, I know of a job you could get over in Benson City. It is not in your line though—it's a place as bookkeeper in a Smelting Company's office."

"Anything is in my line just now except newspaper work. I'm through with that," said Merlin. "Where is Benson City?"

"It's about twenty miles west of here. It and Smithville are rival towns. Each is fightin' for a railroad and the Company has promised to build to whichever one has the largest population at the end of the year. Just now Benson City's got us down but there's a prospect of us comin' out ahead if that strike of James' is what they say it is—that's what all this talk is about."

"Are there any saloons there?"

"No, nor gambling dens of any kind. The people won't have them and claim they are a detriment to the town."

"Then Benson City is the place for me," said Merlin emphatically; "What is the gentleman's name that has the job to let?"

"Just call Benson Smelting Company and you will find him. If you want to go today, you'd better hurry. The stage leaves at one o'clock."

Merlin looked at his watch. It was now half-past twelve and a good half mile to the stage station.

"Well, Mr. Jones, I will have to hurry. You can just send my trunk to me tomorrow. Be good to yourself and I hope we will meet again sometime." But they never did.

He hastened down the street, avoiding the drunken groups as much as possible until he came to the station. The stage was preparing to start and he had only time enough to jump aboard. In a few minutes they were leaving the outskirts of the town and as the stage-coach creaked along the rugged mountain trail and the little town grew dim in the distance, he bade farewell to Smithville and the life he had lived there with genuine relief and pleasure. It seemed as though a load had been lifted from his shoulders.

The coachman seemed very little inclined to sociability; and as there were no other passengers aboard, Merlin was left alone with his thoughts and reflections. More and more he appeared to be playing the role of an adventurer. Just moving about from place to place, dipping into life and gaining always more knowledge, he was drifting farther and farther from his home and his boyhood—led on by the lure of the world. Already his early days at Devondale, his first friends and associates, seemed miles away and between him and them stretched a vague dim ocean, the heaving angry billows of time. On ly one year he had been away from there—and yet—oh, how long seemed that year! He had not thought that so many things could have happened in so brief a time. He had left home and suffered all the haunting pangs of homesickness; he had felt the sting of failure and learned of the world's indifference; he had gone down into the depths and written of what he had beheld; he had visited the rendezvous of malicious cowards and had been beaten almost to death; he had seen a common laborer—one so lowly and disreputable that the world's more sanctimonious hypocrites would have spurned him—lay down his life for a friend; and once more he was adrift on the seas of fortune. This had only been one little glimpse of life—a passive, fleeting glimpse, yet each event stood out in such coloring that it was forever impressed on the retina of his memory. And he felt an impulse stirring within him that moved him to give this picture to the world and make them partakers of his own experiences. He could do this with the pen. He could write it all down in books of fiction that would be veritable transcriptions of the soul. Misgivings came to him as he reasoned upon it. Had not others seen as much as he? Had they not gone through fire and dinned in deluges of hell to gain their reward and never gave the story to the world? Was he more of an artist than they? He argued with himself. Yet that small voice, loud now and ever insistent, called him and wrote he must. He did not think of financial reward. It was not a part of his plans. The true artist does not work for the money he receives, but for the pure joy of giving the creative touch to something; in seeing a flower of his fancy unfold petal by petal until it blossoms into a thing of beauty and a joy forever. So, thought Merlin, he would labor. And as he thought of it, the desire became still stronger until it was linked inseparably with his future, as potent as his will and as palpitant as his heartbeats.

From his reverie he was awakened by the grinding of the wheels as they rounded a rocky curve and began to ascend the steep trail. They were going out of the foothills up into the plateau; farther away on the horizon stood the mighty Rockies, their snowy crowns projected against the blue April sky. Always when approaching these mountains they had appeared to be only a few miles distant; but the nearer one came to them the farther they seemed to recede, till at last, when one imagined himself at their base, they stood like a far sky-line in the distance. Around the turnings of the crooked trail the old coach swung, lumbering over the loose stones, the weary horses panting furiously, the whip of the driver cracking alternately with his "Gad smash!" Sometimes the road clung to a ledge and as the horses picked their way carefully around a bend, the stage seemed to be suspended over a mighty precipice; or again the way led between high banks and Merlin's face was fanned by mountain pine that grew by the roadside, or brushed by the quivering leaves of the aspen. Then with a mighty effort the horses cleared a little knoll and they came out upon the arid plateau.

The sun was already set and a pink, purplish and golden veil hung over the mountain; weird and eerie sounded the voices of the desert creatures, the fainting cries of the night birds, the lone call of the coyotes and the monotonous chirr of the insects in the sagebrush.

On a smooth road they drove at a faster gait and it was still twilight when, far away in the distance, Merlin could see the lights of Benson City gleaming.

BOARD OF CONTROL FREESES INGRAM CROCKETT

Frankfort, Ky.—The State Board of Control today paroled Ingram Crockett, who was convicted in May, 1914, of embezzeling $30,000 from a Henderson bank, of which he was cashier. He received five sentences of from one to ten years each, and under the judgment of the Franklin circuit court, holding that he should be paroled when he had served the minimum of each sentence, the attorney general said he was entitled to parole last month. Crockett will leave the state.

"While you are asking papa for my hand in marriage, Phillip, I'll be playing something lively on the piano," said the sweet young thing.

"No, I wouldn't do that, Jessica," replied the young man, "you know people can't keep their feet still when they hear lively music."

YOUR first impression of this present day Maxwell as it passes you on the street is one of decided beauty. Your first ride in it, whether at the wheel or in the tonneau: tells you of its rare charm.

But after six months you find a new admiration for the Maxwell. You find it shuns the repair shop, that it runs and runs and never stops running.

Then after a year is past you develop an enthusiasm for it that dictionary words don't seem to fully describe.

And then after you have had it for more than even the Maxwell salesman said it was you search for the reason.

This is what you find:

For five years Maxwell cars have been built on the single chassis plan. To date 300,000 have been turned out on this plan. Each are better than the other. Each one better looking than the other.

There have been more than 1000 refinements in the Maxwell, but never ones have the Maxwell executives swerved from the original program.

You conclude that reliability was designed "into" the car and built "into" it, and that a policy of 300-000-all alike is the soundest kind of reason for writing your check for a present-day Maxwell.

WHY, INDEED?

General Lee had been lecturing his new recruits at some length on "The duties of a soldier." At last he thought the time had come to find out just what he had accomplished:

Casting his eyes over the room, he fixed them on Private Murphy as his first victim. "Private Murphy," he said, "why should a soldier be ready to die for his country?"

The private scratched his head for a while; Then an ingratiant smile flitted across his face. "Sure, captain," he said, pleasantly, "you're right. Why should he?"

Willie was being measured for his first made-to-order suit of clothes.

"Do you want the shoulders padded, my little man?" inquired the tailor.

"No," said Willie significantly, "pad the pants."

Student (to servant at the door) — "Miss Brown?"

Servant — "She's engaged."

Student — "I know. I'm what she's engaged to."

Senator Simmons, one of the Tariff leaders, relates a conversation he had with a New York politician who was recently in Washington.

"There is one objection to the new tariff bill that I have not seen mentioned, Senator," said the politician.

"What is that?" I asked.

"It doesn't remove the tacks from carpets."

Wife (complainingly) — "You're not like Mr. Knagg. They've been married twenty years, and Mrs. Knagg says her husband is so tender."

Husband — "Tender! Well, he ought to be, after being in hot water that long."

"Why is Reginald capering about in that extraordinary fashion? Has he stubbed his toe?"

No. He has thought of a good name for a new dance, and is trying to invent a new step to fit it."

Young man (ardently) — "I press my suit on bended knee."

Young Lady (icily). — "Haven't you an ironing board?"

Quizzer — "What's the matter, old man? You look worried."

Sizer — "I have cause to. I hired a man to trace my pedigree."

Quizzer — "Well, what's the trouble? Hasn't he been successful?"

Sizer — "Successful! I shouldn't say he has! I'm paying him hush money."

"Don't you believe every woman should have a nose?" asked the Sweet Young Thing.

"No," replied the Young Man, "but I believe every woman should have a voter."

Senator Borah was talking at a dinner at Boise, about an embarrassing question that had been asked at Chicago.

"The question," he said, smiling, "went unanswered. It was like Little Willie's query."

A young gentleman was spending the week-end at Little Willie's cottage at Atlantic City, and on Sunday evening after dinner, there being a scarcity of chairs on the crowded piazza, the young gentleman took Willie on his lap.

"Then, during a pause in the conversation, Little Willie looked up at the young gentleman and piped:

"Am I as heavy as Sister Mabel?"

"Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he reap." Johnny repeated it after his father several times, and seemed to have mastered the correct wording.

As they drew near the Sunday school the father gave Johnny his last rehearsal. "Now, son," he said, "let's have the Golden Text once more."

This is what he got:

"Whatsoever a man sows always reaps."

Ten-year-old William came home one day in a regrettable state of disorder and with a somewhat bruised face.

"Oh, Willie! Willie!" exclaimed his mother, shocked and grieved. "You have disobeyed me again; how often have I told you not to play with that naughty Johnson boy."

"Mamma," said William, in utter disgust at this feminine reprimand, "do I look as if I had been playing with anybody?"

SHAKE INTO YOUR SHOES

Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder to be shaken into the shoes and sprinkled in the foot-bath. The Plattsburgh Camp Manual advises men in training the use of Foot-Ease after each morning, prevents blisters and sore spots and relieves painful, swollen, smarting feet and takes the sting out of corns and bunions. A certain relief for sweating, callous, tired, aching feet. Always use Allen's Foot-Ease to break in new shoes. Sold everywhere, 25c.

Her head rested on his shoulder, and her little hand lay confidingly in his.

"Tell me, Alfred," said the happy maiden, "how you ever came to pick me out as the girl you wanted to marry."

"Well, Dora," replied the ecstatic young man in a gush of confidence, "it was mother that put me up to it."

The Latest Vogues In Hair Dressing

The well dressed woman of today has come to realize that to be smartly and fashionably dressed, the coiffure deserves first attention. She spends hundreds of dollars yearly on her clothes, some spend thousands, the purpose of which is to bring out the charm of her personality. Unless there is a harmonizing smartness between her attire and coiffure—which should be the crowning glory of it all—her efforts will be in vain. It will be like an artist painting a classical landscape with a humble hut in the foreground.

The styles of hairdressing are undergoing a decided change this season. The most authoritative fashion magazines in the country agree that it is poor form to wear this season the hair in a skimpy, flat manner and that the prevailing mode is to wear the hair high on the crown. Harper's Bazar, the great fashion authority, dwells largely on the smart coiffures.
